St. John, N.B.

Although not the capital, St. John is the largest and busiest city in New Brunswick, with an ideal location on the Bay of Fundy. In the world of commerce it is well known for its immense shipments of lumber, while the large and commodious harbour is open for navigation all the year round, and, being the winter port of Canada, the shipping trade in St. John is always one of great briskness and activity.

"The Call of the West" has to some extent retarded its expansion in recent years, but a steady advancement in population and commercial activity tend to show that St. John is indeed a thriving city with a bright future ahead of it. The scenery is of the finest, and many are the places of interest in St. John and vicinity, including the historic Martello Tower, and remarkable Reversible Falls with their strange phenomenon.

This Book of Views will give some idea of a well laid city, with handsome buildings, wide streets, pretty and well kept parks.
